36 Hours in Seville

Known for its many festivals, Moorish architectural flourishes and, of course, flamenco, the capital of Spain's Andalusia region is a buoyant city whose many cultures are reflected in its cuisine, buildings, art and history.

Triana House (Calle Rodrigo de Triana 98; 34-644-889-810; trianahouse.com; from around 170 euros) has no lobby and no communal spaces unless you count the marble staircase, but behind its unassuming exterior are possibly the loveliest and quietest bedrooms on the Triana side of Seville, with a whiff of Art Deco design in its chevron-patterned black and white stone floors. A hearty breakfast that might include cured ham, tomato tapenade, muffins, toast and olive oil is delivered to your door at the requested time. Its six rooms are tastefully decorated according to themes like Paris, Napoli or Beijing.
